

GOVERNOR GILCHRIST'S ORDER FOR RESPITE

THE LUNACY QUESTION AGAIN
BEING AGITATED.

Very Probable That Another Examination Will Be Made as to Owen's Sanity.

R. H. Owen, the doomed white man, was dissatisfied when he learned Friday morning that he was not to be hung at this time, and that a reprieve of fourteen days had been granted him.

When Sheriff Ramsey called upon him in his cell and informed him of the news he simply remarked that "He didn't give a d—, but wished they had hung him."

Following is a copy of the order as received from Governor Gilchrist, and which arrived Friday morning, together with a new death warrant setting Friday, July 23, as the time for the hanging:

State of Florida, Executive office.

"Whereas, application is made to me for a respite of the death sentence ordered to be executed upon R. H. Owen, convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to be hung on the ninth day of July, A. D. 1939, pending an examination into the sanity of the said R. H. Owen;

"Now, therefore, acting under the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Florida, I do hereby grant a reprieve to the said R. H. Owen for a period of fourteen days from the ninth day of July, 1939, to the 23d day of July, 1939, at the termination of which time the warrant for his execution will be enforced unless a commutation of said sentence be sooner decreed by the State Board of Pardons."

The above order was signed and sealed by the Governor and Secretary of State. Whether the Governor will again send an expert here is not known, for the former man sent by the State department has rendered his report declaring the man to be sane.

His Mistake.

The vender of images, who had just been thrown out of a large office building, wept bitterly as he looked at his torn clothes and broken wares.

"Who did this?" inquired the friendly cop. "I'll pinch 'em if you say the word."

"No; it was my fault," said the victim, gathering up the remains of a plaster image. "I insisted on trying to sell a bust of Noah Webster to a meeting of simplified spellers."—Denver Republican.

The first-class coach of this train is torn up considerably and will have to go to the shop for repairs and a general overhauling, while the remainder of the train is all right.

Last night's train was backed in over the wrecked place and trains from this time on will make the connection the same as before, the officials being very alert in having all damage repaired within a short while after it happened, which shows the rapidity with which the relief train was rushed to the place of the accident, the superintendent and other officials accompanying it.

Attraction.

Fruits fall to the earth because the earth attracts them. Bubbles in a cup of tea stand around the sides of the cup because the cup attracts them. The little bubbles gather about the large ones because the large bubbles attract the smaller ones. Why do the bubbles follow a teaspoon? Because the spoon attracts them. Why are the sides of a pond covered with leaves, while the middle is clear? Because the shore attracts the leaves to itself.

They Changed.

A Vienna paper relates an anecdote of the painter Makart, who was sometimes as taciturn as Von Moltke. One evening at a dinner he sat for an hour next to the soubrette Josephine Gallmeyer without volunteering a word. Finally she lost patience and exclaimed, "Well, dear master, suppose we change the subject."

GUAVA JELLY.

By John Belling, Florida Agricultural Experiment Station.

Undiluted guava juice consists of over 90 per cent of water, about 5 per cent of sugars, and a small percentage of pectin and acid. It also contains some substances which give the color and flavor to the jelly made from it. Pure guava jelly usually contains about 20 per cent of water, about 75 per cent of sugars, and the rest is pectin, acid, etc. During the boiling of the mixture of juice and cane-sugar, the acid acts on the sugar, and changes part of it into invert sugar, so that it forms a sirup; and if there is enough acid the sugar will not crystallize out. This strong sirup causes the pectin to set as a jelly. The pink color is deepened by longer boiling, or by more acid.

Amounts of Juice and Sugar.

Suppose a large amount of water is added when cooking the guavas. Now if equal amounts of this diluted juice and cane-sugar are taken to make the jelly, there may not be enough pectin, in which case the jelly will not set properly, or will be sticky if it does set; or there may not be enough acid, and the jelly will "sugar;" or there may not be enough of the guava flavor. If a large amount of water has been used in cooking the fruit, more juice and less sugar should be taken to make the jelly. If the guavas have been cooked in a double boiler without water, equal amounts of juice and sugar will yield a good jelly. It was found that the juice from two pounds of ripe guavas, with one pound of sugar, yielded less than one and a half pounds of jelly.

How Far to Boil.

When boiling the jelly, the temperature rises as more and more water evaporates. To secure a uniform jelly, it is desirable always to stop at the same point. This can best be done by the use of a glass thermometer. Such an instrument, reading to 300 degrees F., can usually be bought from a drug store; or if not procurable there, can be purchased for 60 cents from the Arthur H. Thomas Company, Philadelphia. In a series of tests it was found that the best jelly was made when the boiling was stopped at 235 degrees F. It is usually necessary to stop the boiling for a moment, when using the thermometer, because of the bubbling. If the same amount of water is always used in cooking the ripe guavas, and the same proportions of juice and sugar are taken, and if the temperature which is found to give the best jelly is measured with a thermometer, it will be possible to turn out a uniform product year after year.

No iron or steel should come in contact with the fruit or juice. The guavas may be heated till soft in an enamel or aluminum vessel with a small amount of water at the bottom, or in a double boiler. The juice should be squeezed out through cloth in a strong press, measured, and the proper amount of granulated sugar added. A deep aluminum vessel is useful for boiling down the juice. When the sugar has dissolved, the solution can be filtered through cloth. It is boiled down till the thermometer marks the proper temperature, and then run into glasses or molds.
